Route Editor Free Download [Updated-2022]

Fully assembled route files are currently unsupported by Wami, for now you are limited to editing a set of existing locations. The log file generated by Wami can be uploaded to a PC and then opened in the Route Editor application. Any existing locations will be relocated to a new location group and the new location group renamed. If existing locations are far enough apart and their new positions are reasonably close to where they should be that a relocation of the existing locations is acceptable the location groups for existing locations can be renamed and the new location groups renamed. Any locations that have no location information to record will be ignored. Any locations that have no name will be added with a default name (name of driver name and location). Any locations that have no associated landline telephone numbers or numbers that are not cellular numbers will be removed. You can then rearrange the locations in any way you wish. The log file generated by Wami can be uploaded to a PC and then opened in the Route Editor application. Any existing locations will be relocated to a new location group and the new location group renamed. You can then save the resulting output to a route file, which you will then need to copy to Application Data\wamiRoutes on your mobile phone. If your route file is large, it can be exported to a txt file and then opened in a text editor and viewed in a browser. Any built in GPS satellites may be visible on the map, depending on how far you are from them.

WamiRoutes: WamiRoutes and DooDooMaps do not use your phone signal to find out where you are. WamiRoutes will send a message to your phone when it is within range to ensure you know where you are. If the location you are told is not in the route, you will get an error message and be able to select a destination from the map. If the location you are told is in the route but you are in the middle of a longer journey, there will be no error message but you will be given a more accurate ETA. If there is a gas station in the destination range, you may be sent the location of the gas station rather than the destination location. The route file may be copied to your phone and should be available in the Application Data program folder. This application was designed to be a simple WinForms application with a rich detail, which displays information about the current location and those along the route. RouteLogger Description: This is the program that generates the route log file, that contains the location of your journey, timings and ETA. It does this without GPS, cell tower or network connection so it is completely silent and can be used where traditional GPS and GPRS/cell tower are not possible. It may also be useful where the cell towers are slow, or where there is a problem with the cell tower. RouteLogger includes simple mobile mapping functions that tell you where you are on the route with map tiles. Applications: Neither of these applications have any user interfaces, but both are C#.Net 4.0 and each consumes the mobile application datawami routes database that the other uses to determine locations. Both applications have been developed using the Windows Application Template from Microsoft's Visual Studio 2010.

DataWamiRoutes This application will transfer your route log file generated by RouteLogger onto your mobile phone via Bluetooth. It then shows your route on a map and allows you to print a route. For Windows Mobile 7 and Windows Mobile Pocket PC 2007 devices only. Download >> 5.1MB DatawamiRoutesExplorer This program allows you to view the data in your datawami routes database, with all location and ETA data shown in one window. For Windows Mobile 5 and 6 devices only. Download >> 1.3MB DatawamiRoutesExplorer Description: This program allows you to view the data in your datawami routes database, with all location and ETA data shown in one window. What's New In?

Geocode: The Geocode tab helps you find destinations, hotels, food, etc. from location - based criteria. To find eats nearby or find a hotel closest to a point, point to an address from Contacts, or type in your own location. Report View: You can print or email any of the reports in the Application DatawamiRoutes. This allows you to see the location and cell broadcast data in a fairly abstract way to understand where you are in the middle of a trip. The reports show a location symbol and ETA.

MapView: The MapView allows you to see the locations of any of the location groups on a map. The MapView uses OpenStreetMap which is a free map service at Google, and allows you to view the locations of location groups on a map. If you have any problems with Wami, first google the problem, and then post your problem description on one of the support forums. If you are an amateur astronomer be aware that this application is built for use by satellites, not humans. There is no password, I'll give the key to anyone that wants to try it out. Good luck. I love this software....after doing this quest for a full 3 weeks I thought I was lost and stranded. My vacation was ruined. BUT Anyway I found this very helpful and I like the fact that I can see a map view of a generated route...., that makes me feel like I'm not lost in the car if I'm confronted with this software.... :-) Now....Is it possible to perform searches (Ex. "travel via New York") or determine "points of interest", places to go before our arrival? There's a section to the right of the MapView where you can click on a location to see nearby data (address, hotels, gas stations, and restaurants). If you try to filter the MapView by location group, then it shows you only the type of data for that location group. Ed. Thanks for your input. This is my first post so I'm not familiar with this forum. Thanks in advance for your time. Last edited by alphccc; 1st July 2009 at 12:19 AM. Reason: added a little red line I love this
