As mentioned in the sub query, I want to retrieve the reverse order of the index's values, so that it will return the record first for KEY1 then for KEY2 and so on. So in this case, I want to order the records first by KEY1 then KEY2 and so on. Is there a way to achieve this using SQL only? A: You can use ROW_NUMBER(). Example: SELECT [Column], ROW_NUMBER() OVER (ORDER BY [Key]) AS RowNumber FROM [Table] WHERE [Key] IN (KEY1, KEY2, KEY3,...) A: Assuming the only way you can get the list of keys is in a scalar query, just aggregate the table by the column you are looking for first and apply ROW_NUMBER() to get the index. You could then just order by this expression and limit the results: SELECT [Column] FROM [Table] GROUP BY [Column] HAVING COUNT(DISTINCT [Key]) > 0 ORDER BY ROW_NUMBER() OVER(ORDER BY [Key]); Monday, May 9, 2011 From one to an infinite number... However, if you are working with an x4 display setup, then you need to be careful with the settings. Open up the Metro Scaler tool and then go to the Display Settings tab. In the screen that appears, you need to select the display you want to work with. The options are Vertical or Horizontal, Full or Wide Screen, Device or Different scaling and DPi options for each of them. As you can see, the options for the x4 display are not the same as for the x2 display so you need to take into account the specific functionality of each display type. In case you have more than two monitors, then you need to apply the changes to each display separately. After you have decided on the options, you can use the buttons and sliders to set the values and then adjust the display as desired. If you have a multi-monitor setup, then you can create different displays for each display and set the values accordingly. If you want to be notified when the changes have taken place, then you can use the configuration tab that will provide you with a visual notification. The configuration tab will allow you to select the user interface language that you would like to use. You will need to
