
A: The error is just a warning about accessing a package that isn't signed correctly. Goto your package manager and check if you have a package for the previous version: `curl -s | grep -Fv "dns_interface_gw"` See if it is installed and if not, run the following command to install it: `curl -sL | grep -Fv "dns_interface_gw"` Once the package is installed, remove the warning (or the warning will remain in the future) by updating the packages. Reveals new ID and password requirements in 2015 In 2014 the company released, for the first time, a policy that instituted new identity and password requirements for its users. The first step was the announcement of the new policy in late September 2014, and in early October 2014, a public beta was made available to Microsoft's customers and to the public. In March of 2015, the new password requirements came into effect. Users have since had 90 days to comply, and if they fail to do so, they will be given a series of escalating notifications. This is to ensure that users have taken the time to complete the process, thus making the process more user-friendly and bettering the security posture of the company. Microsoft will also be updating its security features and offerings, including its BitLocker disk encryption feature, Windows Defender Antivirus, as well as Windows Firewall and other security features. Microsoft has made good progress so far in 2015, and it will continue to be improving and enhancing its offerings in an effort to allow its users and customers to be more secure.
